Mr. Robert Johnston, the newly elected president of the city board of education, is the head of the Beliaire Stove Company, and an excellent man in every respect. The board has been put to the test latterly in keeping a full corps of teachers. Cupid seems to be doing a quiet work among the lady teachers, and two of them dropped out quite suddenly to try matrimonial fortunes, and the gossips are at work now concerning other probabilities in this same line. All of them have done well, and the men who won them are to be congratulated, but the board of education and Superintendent Anderson have been kept busy filling the vacancies.
